

A Medicine That Overcomes Most Obsolete Kidney Troubles

About 1904 I was bothered about two years with a severe attack of kidney trouble. My condition was such that I was hardly able to drag around the house and do my work. I did not have any appetite and could not rest at night, and I felt more tired in the morning than I did on going to bed. My doctor treated me for about one month; he said that I had kidney trouble, but he did not give me any relief. By chance one day, my husband was in town and noticed Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, on a drugist's shelf and decided to bring some home for me to try; the first bottle gave such relief that I continued the use of Swamp-Root until I was restored to good health, and I have had good health for the last ten years. I cheerfully recommend Swamp-Root to others who have kidney troubles.

Yours truly,

Minnie Dorrough,

Antlers, Okla.

Personally appeared before me this first day of March, 1916, Minnie Dorrough, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

LEAD WIDENED AS GAME WENT

Montpelier High Finally Had Spaulding High Overwhelmed

43 TO 18 WAS SCORE ON MONTEPELIER FLOOR

Largest Crowd of the Season Witnessed League Contest

Held to a scant four points in the first half, Spaulding high school was able to do but little better in the final period and met defeat at the hands of the Montpelier high school five last evening in Montpelier armory hall, 43 to 18. The Spaulding team was not at home in the big hall, nearly twice as large as their own gym, and unaccustomed to long pass work, the forwards attempted long shots from near the center of the floor time and again, only to miss caging the ball.

Notwithstanding that handicap, the visiting team managed to keep Montpelier well guarded and it was not until the second period that Clark, who has averaged over twelve baskets to the game in the last five contests, was unable to begin rolling up the points. In the last five minutes of play the Spaulding team seemed to lose all its energy and ambition and it was an easy matter for Montpelier to run up the total score by ten or more points.

Spaulding scored the first point at the start, Nichols making a basket from the foul line. Spaulding held the lead for a space of half a minute, then Gross made a basket from the floor and it was nearly fifteen minutes before Carroll was able to make Spaulding's first two-point basket. With the score at 15 to 4 at the end of the first period, the eight hundred spectators, the biggest crowd of the season, with a large delegation from Barre, had visions of a hard battle in the final period. The majority were happily disappointed, for the Montpelier team gained the advantage with every minute and by virtue of their victory, are now the sole occupants of second place in the league standing.

The summary:

When your kidneys are weak and torpid, they do not properly perform their functions; your back aches, and you do not feel like doing much of anything. You are likely to be dependent and to borrow trouble, just as if you hadn't enough already. Don't be a victim any longer.

The old reliable medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, gives strength and tone to the kidneys and builds up the whole system. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar combination of roots, barks and herbs. ## IN DEFENCE OF BRANDEIS

Former Head of the Bar Association Testifies for Him

REPUTATION, HE SAYS, IS EXCELLENT

This Applies Both to Brandeis' Character and Ability

Washington, March 2.—Edward F. McClenen of Boston, member of Louis D. Brandeis' law firm, testified again yesterday before the Senate committee investigating the fitness of Mr. Brandeis to be a member of the supreme court.

Mr. McClenen is giving his explanation of the various charges against Mr. Brandeis which the committee is inquiring into. Yesterday the witness continued his statement regarding the United Shoe Machinery company matters which he began late Tuesday.

Stephen S. Gregory of Chicago, former president of the American Bar association, testified that Mr. Brandeis' reputation, as far as he knew, was "excellent," both as to ability and character. He said he was speaking of his reputation with side of Boston, as he had only talked with one or two Boston lawyers about him. Mr. McClenen then resumed the stand to explain the various charges brought against Mr. Brandeis.

Conferences at Brandeis' suggestion between shoe manufacturers and Sidney W. Winslow, president of the United Shoe Machinery company in 1906 over modification of leases desired by the manufacturers, came to nothing, McClenen said, and Brandeis resigned from the shoe company's directorate.

"Brandeis became convinced nothing could be accomplished by conferences and as Brandeis was on the board and thus had a responsibility for the leases, he decided to resign," said McClenen. "He wrote a letter of resignation on Dec. 16, 1906, saying nothing about the leases. Winslow said he knew of no other reason for the resignation except those stated in the letter."

McClenen referred to a subsequent telephone conversation between Winslow and Brandeis in which Winslow explained why he had not acknowledged the letter.

"Winslow said if Brandeis felt that what was coming up this winter might be embarrassing to him if he remained a director, he had nothing to say," the witness said.

"What was coming up," he added, "was another attempt at shoe machinery legislation by the Massachusetts legislature. He referred to a conference between shoe manufacturers and Winslow on Jan. 7, 1907, at which Brandeis, present as a representative of the shoe machinery company, criticized the leases. "He was urging what he believed to be the best interests of the shoe machinery company," McClenen said. At no time in 1906, he added, was Brandeis retained or appearing for his shoe manufacturing clients.

"We had no general retainer from shoe manufacturers," he testified. "Because they had been clients of Brandeis he had an avenue by which he got them to assist in defeating legislation which his client, the shoe machinery company, wanted defeated."

President Wilson's Most Intimate Friend.

In the March American Magazine we learn the curious fact that the president's most intimate friend, Colonel E. M. House, who can take his grip to the White House without invitation, was a total stranger to Wilson four years ago. "The answer may be found, perhaps, nestling inconspicuously between the lines of Colonel House's biography in 'Who's Who in America.'"

"Among other things it says: 'Active in Democratic politics in Texas. Has directed the campaigns of many successful Democratic nominees for governor since 1892; was never a candidate for office.'"

"That last seems to be the keynote. Mr. Wilson is fond of Colonel House because Colonel House doesn't want anything. And when you are president of the United States, or in any other public executive position of importance, it is surprising how few persons of this sort you meet. The president is convinced that Colonel House wants nothing in the world from him beyond the satisfaction of serving him."

"While the president values Colonel House's judgment on both men and matters, he regards him as at his best when sizing up men. This may be why there are at present two men in the cabinet from Colonel House's state of Texas."

"Another particular in which Mr. Wilson places confidence in Colonel House is in sensing public opinion. He is not eyes," laughs Wilson, who might have said with equal truth that House is his human barometer."

Will War Compel Us to Dress Like Japanese?

In the March Woman's Home Companion a writer tells of the growing of silk in daily dresses.

"Heretofore, with a few exceptions, the evening dress and the demi-formal costume alone were made of lustrous fabrics. Now, however, these fabrics have entered into the realm of the 'tailored' and suits of silk will be quite as popular as those of cloth. To the casual observer this seems like one of fashion's many whims, but in reality there is a far more serious reason for it, and that is the war. Many of the foreign wadded and woolen mills are closed, thus crippling the supply of these fabrics to such an extent that something else had to be substituted—and when one really thinks of it, the idea of using silk extensively in the spring season is a most sensible one. Of course, for general wear, sport costumes, business suits, and so forth, the heavier fabrics will be employed; but this is to be largely a silk season."
